

Hayes students celebrate super 100 days

Craig Shoup, Reporter Published 3:13 p.m. ET Feb. 13, 2018

First graders decorate capes with superhero themes

(Photo: Craig Shoup/The News-Messenger)
CONNECTTWEETLINKEDINCOMMENTEMAILMORE

FREMONT - The first grade students at Hayes Elementary are 100 days smarter as the group of 41 students on Tuesday celebrated the school's 100th day in session with their parents.

This year's theme was superheroes.

First grade teacher Kaite Buckley said the students were tasked with decorating their own cape to show off their interests, with some students decorating "Keep it 100" to celebrate the 100th day of school while others highlighted their favorite movies and cartoons.

"It's really nice to see what interests the kids have outside of school," Buckley said about the capes.

The students and many of their parents were able to move through seven stations filled with activities including creating a Fruit Loop necklace and playing games that test math and reading skills.

First grader JaKari Bradley makes a Fruit Loop necklace. (Photo: Craig Shoup/The News-Messenger)

Buckley said each year students at the elementary level celebrate the 100th day of school with a certain theme.

Often schools will have students dress like 100-year-olds with walkers and gray hair, but Buckley said the school wanted to try something different this year.

cshoup@gannett.com

419-334-1035

Twitter: @CraigShoupNH

First grade students at Hayes Elementary celebrate 100 days of school by decorating capes with a superhero theme. (Photo: Craig Shoup/The News-Messenger)