

March 13, 2009

Good job to elementary students

-- John Lewis III, Fremont

As part of Black History Month, I took the opportunity to attend the African American wax museums at Stamm and Atkinson elementary schools.

Each child had to memorize a short biography of the person they had to portray and I was really impressed with how well they recited their speeches.

Congratulations to the children and the teachers responsible for putting the programs together. It was truly a job well done and it let me know that there are some dedicated teachers working very hard to help our children grow in education.

We must support the teachers and volunteers and help whenever possible.

Once again, thank you Stamm and Atkinson students and staff for a job well done.
