Sue Wolf -- an exceptional person

As I read the article about Sue Wolf in The News-Messenger, I was shocked. Being a former player for Fremont Ross and Coach Wolf, I was saddened to see someone of her caliber leave Ross athletics.

She is a person who did things the right way and truly cared about each player as an individual as much as she did as a basketball player. Her goals were to teach young women how to accomplish goals the right way; without cheating or masking grades; having a good work ethic, and using discipline correctly. In today's athletic world, that combination is a rarity. I not only commend Coach Wolf on her own ethics, attitude and work ethic, but more importantly on what she believed in: Teaching and accomplishing goals the right way!

Having gone through college and professional ranks as a basketball player, I still rely on many principles that Coach Wolf instilled in me. Although I know everyone has a job to do in the athletic program and sometimes that involves making difficult decisions, Wolf will be greatly missed and the Fremont Ross girls basketball program has lost a wonderful coach, but more importantly, a person with a big heart, love for the game, and a coaching style that teaches kids about life and basketball.

I am proud and thankful to have played and learned from such a great person. Thanks, Coach, for everything you have given, not only to me, but Fremont Ross athletics.
