

33 students join honor society

Submitted story • March 19, 2010

FREMONT -- Thirty-three students representing 10 schools in the Vanguard-Sentinel School District were inducted into the National Technical Honor Society.

Avery Faust, a Port Clinton High School student in the computer communications network technician program and president of honor society, was the master of ceremonies. She introduced Alexia Eishen as the student speaker. Eishen is a senior in the same program and attends Fremont Ross High School.

Brian Sneider, engineering technologies and robotics instructor, presented the 2010 honorary inductee membership to Craig Stinchcomb, a retired Terra State Community College instructor who taught several college engineering and computer-assisted design classes and was an advocate for tech prep education.

Benjamin Horne, a computer communications network technician senior from Fremont Ross and secretary of honor society, recited the pledge of membership with the new inductees.

The following students met the criteria of academic excellence, scholarship, leadership, community service and willingness to continue their education after high school: Bettsville -- Alyssa Dymond; Clyde -- Aaron Williamson and Emily Wood; Columbian -- Kendra Cornwell and Katelyn Lonsbury; Fremont Ross -- Morgan Bauer, Elizabeth Ellenberger, Alyssa Fischer, Zachary Forney, Alexander Hoffman, Ada Ingram, Tyler Lamalie,

Lauren Lejeune, Andrew Miller, Amber Oglesbee, Sherell Osbin, Thalia Perez, Michael Pickerel, Alexandra Rojas, William Schepflin, Jared Schueren, Ashley Vaerewyck, Britain Wetzell and Luke Wilhelm; Gibsonburg -- Taylor Henline; Hopewell-Loudon -- Alyssa Davidson and Corey Gabel; Lakota -- Amy Gosche; Old Fort -- Lauren Bannister and Zachery Murphy; Port Clinton -- Jacob Buckingham; St. Joseph Central Catholic -- Alex Chudzinski and Jena Hoffman.
