

Stamm students donate food, avoid homework

Submitted story • March 2, 2010

FREMONT -- In hopes of filling the shelves of the local food pantry and building leadership within the school, Stamm students recently held a food drive for the Sandusky County Food Pantry.

To build hype for the food drive, co-chairs Tyler Newell and Austin Jackson arranged a contest between the teachers and students. Whichever group brought in more food would win its demand.

The students were working for a school-wide homework-free night while the teachers were collecting for a quiet lunch. The students soundly defeated the teachers and won a homework-free night.

In all, two pickup trucks were filled with brown paper bags full of macaroni and cheese, pork and beans, canned soup, laundry detergent, bar soap and paper products.
